

Richard Converse MD

Dr. Converse is the Director of the Nuclear Lab at the Presbyterian Heart Group, and a general cardiologist. His professional expertise includes cardiac imaging and all aspects of general cardiology.

PRESBYTERIAN

Richard Converse, MD has been a member of the Presbyterian Heart Group since 2003. He believes that evidence-based medicine, as well as aggressive patient and physician efforts in working together to reduce cardiovascular risk, are together the foundation of excellent patient care. Dr. Converse's outside interests include cycling, hiking, and travel.

For more information about Presbyterian Heart Group, or to schedule an appointment, call (505) 563-2500.

Education and Training

Dr. Converse graduated from Johns Hopkins Medical School, completed his internal medicine residency at Duke University Medical Center, and completed his cardiology training at University of Texas Southwest Medical Center and Parkland Hospital.

Dr. Converse sees patients at these Presbyterian Medical Group locations:

201 Cedar Ave. SE, Suite 7600, Albuquerque
(next to Presbyterian Hospital)

2400 Unser Blvd. SE, Suite 18300, Rio Rancho
(next to Presbyterian Rust Medical Center)

Presbyterian Heart Group

With excellent physicians supported by a dedicated clinical staff and state-of-the-art facilities, the Presbyterian Heart Group earns its reputation as the best heart-care practice in New Mexico.

The cardiologists and surgeons of the Presbyterian Heart Group emphasize preventive care with a focus on improving health. If hospitalization is needed, the group's physicians provide comprehensive treatment in New Mexico's most advanced facilities.

The group's surgeons offer the broadest and most complex services in the state, including New Mexico's only pediatric heart surgery practice. Presbyterian Heart Group also oversees the state's largest and most innovative cardiac rehabilitation program.

www.phs.org

BIO-Converse.Richard